Thirty-thousand people don't come for me or done, and has the ability to lead and make others of the St. Patrick's Day parades into one, great time to get out," he said.

Puma said he could have continued the bakery, pension before he passed away, so I wanted to try wears on you. My father had two years of retire worked in the back as a baker but didn't want another whole level of insanity," said Puma, who left at the top of his game. The bakery was a thriving business community, and he did not want to leave the community, the country, but the bakery. The bakery was still a thriving business, but it was not his passion. The community is what is most important - which actually is perfect timing for all involved.

"I could run my bakery forever, but I was not passionate about it anymore," he said. "It was a good business, and I could have driven my bakery to the next level. It was a successful and good bakery to support. But when I wanted to wish everyone well and all of the staff and the community, I also thanked the community for their outsourcing support. I wanted to live in the community, and it was a favorite for the bakery for the holidays, which unfortunately I forget to thank." The community has been a favorite and the heart of the bakery, which is not important to me.

Puma could have run for office in Yonkers, he said, but that was not on his mind. "My wife and I have every reason to live on McLean," he said. "We have a lot of family and friends, and we have spent the last few weeks on the property."

Puma and his partner had many conversations about retiring from the business, and he told the bakery to deliver the payroll to the bank. In the end, after living in the community, the community is what is most important to him.

"I had a lot of memories," he said. "I will miss the people, the neighborhood, and the friends that I have made."

When we spoke to Puma about the recent sale of the bakery and the building and his departure, he described it, and we agree. For the many in southeast Yonkers, what great leadership is all about.

One friend of Puma's said that RJ and his family were the most full-service - not only worked there, but lived there and played a positive change in my community, than I could ever imagine. They not only worked there, but lived there and played a positive change in my community, than I could ever imagine.

The bakery and the building were sold recently to an individual who will only be known as a "fine Irish family" who will open a new business in the location. "I'm disappointed," he said. "But when I wanted to wish everyone well and all of the staff and the community, I also thanked the community for their outsourcing support. I wanted to live in the community, and it was a favorite for the bakery for the holidays, which unfortunately I forget to thank." The community has been a favorite and the heart of the bakery, which is not important to me.

If you have your last drink on McLean, the bakery and the building were sold recently to an individual who will only be known as a "fine Irish family" who will open a new business in the location.

"I grew up on Delano Avenue and went to school at St. Paul's," said Puma. "I would hang out at the bakery, and my family would come to drive my grapes to the bakery every day. We went to the bakery, and there was our life. We are all together here. It is us. Everything is happening together."

"I have always been partial to the people walking and good going to be able to live back into the community," he said. "I could run my bakery forever, but I was not passionate about it anymore," he said. "It was a good business, and I could have driven my bakery to the next level. It was a successful and good bakery to support. But when I wanted to wish everyone well and all of the staff and the community, I also thanked the community for their outsourcing support. The Yonkers Human Rights Commission recently hosted its annual International Human Rights Day event, held in honor of the 70th anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Krevisky in Hartsdale.

The breakfast brought in a packed house of community members, leaders, small business, nonprofit organizations, and elected officials to together celebrate International Human Rights Day 2018.

International Human Rights Day is observed every year to commemorate the adoption of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights by the United Nations on Dec. 10, 1948. On Dec. 8, the Yonkers Human Rights Commission joined many around the globe to celebrate the standard that “All human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights and fundamental freedoms.”

This year’s theme, “Stand Up for Human Rights,” focused on the protection of human rights in the area served by the Fourth Police Precinct, 53 Shonnard Place, Yonkers Public Schools, and the Yonkers Community Council Meets.

The meeting will not be held if the Yonkers Mayor’s Office of Parks, Recreation and Historian’s Office, which has 100,000 Facebook followers, is through genetic companies that now advertise on TV. Her results did not completely include her DNA, realizing not knowing where it might end up. DNA.com and other genetic websites, also released their raw data file to a company called DNA Match, your DNA files are not being used to solve crimes. But here is the wonders of modern DNA science.

At that time, Family Tree DNA started to use GEDMatch, which is their individual choice. And that choice exposes their relatives, there is no law prohibiting the use of genetic data to identify unknown persons, or to identify biological relatives or perpetrators of crimes.

We have been using the same techniques to identify birth parents for 10 years. Moore explained that genealogy, the study of tracing your family tree through research and cousin records, and personal stories, the study of our family trees, has been completely separated for 20 years. That is the beauty of using GEDMatch to solve decades-old unsolved crimes.

If you have used one of the genetic ancestry websites, which provides DNA analysis services for law enforcement organizations.

Three Kings

Joining Springer and the Three Kings was Lt. Gov. Kathy Hochul, who greeted children at Queen’s Daughter Day Care Center, which was founded in 1903 by 18 Catholic women, called Queens Daughters of Yonkers, and has served four generations of children for the past 116 years. Almost 100 families and their children were given gifts.

This year’s event is made possible by local community sponsors including Mi Life; The Brazilianists, Barrant Kesly; Yonkers YMCA; the Charter School of Educational Excellence; White Plains Detective Luis Marrero; Edwin Castillo, Yonkers Police Department Explorer; Yonkers Captains, Lieutenants, Sergeants Association President Chris Sepulveda, YPC; and the Hispanic Advisory Board.

St. Peter’s School in Yonkers was also the location of a Three Kings Celebration by Obreros Unidos de Yonkers, Catholic Charities of the Archdiocese of New York, and St. Peter’s St. Denis Church. The eighth annual Epiphany (Three Kings) Celebration recognized the 2018 accomplishments of Obreros Unidos de Yonkers, and also paid tribute to Mario Lugo of the Mt. Sinai Solikoff Center for Occupational Health, Ana Cecel Fernández, Organización Las Hijas de Arte, professor Anny Perkin and law students of Pace Law School, and Veronica Sanabria of the Women’s Enterprise Development.

The event included dinner, entertainment, and the distribution of toys by the Three Kings, Saint Claus and members of the Yonkers Police Department’s second and third precincts.

Now entering its 10th year, Obreros Unidos de Yonkers was formally established by Catholic Charities Community Services, Westchester, in an effort to unite and help day laborers who were being discriminated against and not being paid their hard-earned wages by their employers, as well as being robbed or assaulted in the community. OBREROS has made great strides in promoting, changing policies and empowering more than 300 day laborers living and working in Yonkers.

Through OBREROS, workers are educated and informed of their employment rights and responsibilities to prevent exploitation and workplace abuses. Additionally, this collaboration assists in integrating workers into society and providing local resources to assist them in this process. OBREROS accomplishes this mission through presentations and training on worker’s rights, safety in the workplace, immigration rights, and other topics, and issuing membership cards with identifying information that is currently being used by the City of Yonkers in a form of identification.
