Crisis from YPS Budget Errors Avoided

By Dan Murphy

Mayor Mike Spano presented his proposed fiscal year 2015 budget to members of the City Council last Friday. Despite a $55 million budget overdrawn in the Yonkers Public Schools budget in January, he presented a $1 billion budget that raises property taxes by only 0.7 percent (to the 2 percent property tax cap), provides additional funding for the arts, proposes no layoffs or cuts to422-Journalists and key employees, which will include human resources, law, and finance.

In addition to the $10 million in consolidation of administrative costs from YPS to city government, Spano will appoint a Commission on Consolidation and Efficiencies that will be given the task of finding another $12 million in savings through consolidation between YPS and the City Hall.

“The challenge index is designed to identify schools that are close to the best job in spending average student to college-level tests and exams,” explained Mathers, the education commissioner.

Mathers warned that the ranking also displays a school’s “equity and fairness” and “across a matrix created by the College Board to identify the percentage of students who are ready to enroll in college.

“With this number down, I believe, is still a lean, balanced budget that the state comptroller and state Department of Education in finding efficiencies and achieving $12 million in savings, or 2 percent of the overall YPS budget, without jeopardizing recently restored post-secondary college and career opportunities, free event helps students and families explore future opportunities, as the future.

The Yonkers Public Library will celebrate its 100th anniversary this year, according to Shyra Lewis, a museum librarian at the library. The celebration will include a special exhibit on the history of the library, as well as a variety of events and programs for all ages. The museum will also be open late into the evening on some days, offering visitors a chance to explore the exhibits and learn more about the library's history.

More than 70 women attended an interactive forum last week at the Hudson River Museum, hosted by Assemblymember Shelley Mayer and the Women's Political Action Forum. The event was sponsored by the Yonkers Democratic Women's Club and the Yonkers Democratic Women's Club. The event aimed to raise awareness of the issues affecting women in Yonkers, including the importance of equal pay, reproductive rights, and access to affordable health care.

The event was moderated by Assemblymember Shelley Mayer, who welcomed the attendees and introduced the speakers for the evening. The speakers included Assemblymember Shelley Mayer, who discussed the role of women in New York State government, and Assemblymember Marilyn L. Williams, who spoke about the importance of representation for women in the Legislature.

The event was well attended, with over 70 women in attendance. The attendees included women from all walks of life, including business owners, educators, and community leaders. The event was sponsored by the Hudson River Museum and the Yonkers Democratic Women's Club.

The Women's Political Action Forum is a group of women who work together to ensure that women's voices are heard in the political process. They work to elect women to office, and to ensure that women's issues are at the forefront of the political agenda.

The event was a great success, and the attendees were enthusiastic about the issues discussed. They left with a better understanding of the challenges facing women in Yonkers, and a commitment to working together to create a more equitable future for all women.

"We are elected to do a job and it's not at the state's behest," said Councilman Christopher Johnson. “I also agree that the state should give us more dollars for education. The property tax is an extra burden the citizens of Yonkers do not bear.”

Councilman Mike Brolin added: “We started out with a doubt about mayoral control and now have state control. The state combined the budget error at YPS, and we find the superintendent and directors to blame. Now the state is giving more power to the comptroller who will be the sole guard in the first place.”

Councilman Sheppard said it’s wrong when municipalities give power to Albany. “We don’t get just property tax from the state, and if they are going to put a control board in Yonkers, it’s a power grab, and if they want to cut it works before you try to undercut the law that is in place. They gave the budget agreement one year and see how it works before you try to undercut the law that is in place.”

“The Council for the city of Yonkers School District to enter into an inter-League agreement with the City of Yonkers relating to the provision of educational services of the school district, subject to the approval of the State Board of Regents, in order to secure an additional $25 million in funds each year is unnecessary and duplicative; and

Whereas these alternatives shall include in addition to other cost saving measures, including additional revenue sources and most importantly by the open and transparent city councils to obtain input from all stakeholders; and

Whereas we ask that the mandatory language be replaced with permissive language found under New York Code Local Finance Law 1010 allowing the municipality to reject state budgetary recommendations if justifications are provided to the statutory writing; and

Whereas we commit to explore every means possible to participate in the inter-League agreement with the City of Yonkers Public School System still a significant deficit; and

Whereas the Council of the City of Yonkers has received federal grants totaling $2.4 million in 2009 and 2010 requesting that the inequities in the state’s education funding formula which affect the City of Yonkers to be addressed; and

Whereas the state education formula and audit continues to show the City of Yonkers and the Yonkers Public School System is in the other three big second-class cities, Buffalo, Rochester and Syracuse; by providing school funding that is at least $10,000,000 less than what is provided to the other three big second-class cities, Buffalo, Rochester and Syracuse; and whereas the state funding formula is clearly discriminatory, detrimental and disparate; and

Whereas the situation has become so egregious, that according to Buffalo News, property taxes in Yonkers represent a rate that is at least 30 percent lower than that of Buffalo, Rochester and Syracuse; and whereas the state funding formula is clearly systematically unfair, detrimental and disparate; and

That because for the past few years, the state has under-funded the school systems through the Gap Elimination Act, and that the current situation is the final trial budget approved by the council; and

Whereas we strongly oppose this municipal state oversight since it usurps the role and function of the Legislature that is given in the City of Yonkers Charter; and

Whereas the New York State comptroller already is the final budget for the City of Yonkers under the 1976 Budget Act; and

Whereas we believe additional oversight with the requirement that all state recommendations be incorporated into our final annual budget

U.S. Attorney Preet Bharara

By Dan Murphy:

Two streamlined events took place in New York last week, when U.S. Attorney Preet Bharara, and the New York Times, criticized Gov. Andrew Cuomo for his decision to dissolve the Moreland Commission, a state commission empaneled by Cuomo and the State Legislature, in an unceremonious act that drew ire from lashes of New Yorkers and legions of others who have sent complaints to the Moreland Commission, a state commission empaneled by Cuomo and the State Legislature.

The Moreland Commission, which operated for nine months, was tasked with fighting corruption and graft within New York State government — specifically naming the most disastrous government in the country.

The state budget agreement reached April 1 between the governor, Assembly and Senate included ethics rules such as the public disclosure of one-state employees, this compliant, independent enforcement at the Board of Elections, disclosures of outside inc- terests by legislators, and a tougher bribery law for public servants.

The commission was introduced with a lot of fanfare and it was supposed to express his disappointment of the governor and state legislators.

The Times also does not agree with Cuomo’s claim that the Mo- reland Commission was disbanded before its time. Bharara said, “I don’t think there’s any result where this has been resolved, as a result of the new ethics laws passed last year.”

And The Old Grey Lady, and government ethics watchdog group, also attacked the move, adding, “I don’t think there’s any result where this has been resolved, as a result of the new ethics laws passed last year.”

Editor’s Note: Rising Media Group is aware of several Westchester residents who have sent complaints to the Moreland Commission, but we have not heard back, on their claims of corruption in Westchester County.

Testing Accountability Legislation Included in Final State Budget

Included in the recently passed, fourth consecutive on-time state budget is a major package of accountability reforms, articulated by Governor Andrew Cuomo, that is designed to address various aspects of the state's performance and to provide for better management and governance. This comprehensive legislation, which is set to take effect on July 1, 2014, includes measures to strengthen the state's public school system, improve the delivery of healthcare services, and enhance the state's financial management and reporting practices.

Lend a Hand During “Pitch in For Parks”

County Executive Robert Astorino is asking residents to get into gear and rekindle the spirit of volunteerism by pitching in for the future of our parks and greenways. Astorino, along with parks and recreation directors from across the county, will be spend the day – and should dress appropriately for outdoor work. Work gloves, cleaning tools and supplies will be provided for volunteers who attend.

Learn About Oakland Center at Historical Meeting

The Yonkers Historical Society will hold its annual general meeting this coming Friday, April 18, at 7:30 p.m. in the Flynn Room of the Yonkers Public Library. The meeting is free and open to the public.

After a brief business meeting, award-winning historian and author, Craig Swain, will be the featured speaker. Swain is the author of numerous books and has been featured on various media outlets.

Swain will present an overview of Oakland Center, a historic site located on the west side of Yonkers. The site was once the home of the Oakland Estate, a grand mansion that was once the residence of several prominent families of Yonkers.

Swain will discuss the history of the site, including its architectural significance and its role in the history of Yonkers. He will also discuss the efforts of the Yonkers Historical Society to preserve the site and its role in the community. Swain will be available to answer questions and sign copies of his book.
