Mayer Ugears Stronger Child Care & After-School Programs

The second piece of legislation would require the developer to post information about their programs online. This will allow providers to post information about their programs and services, allowing parents to compare the quality of different child care programs. The bill also requires providers to offer programs that are designed to help children develop socially and emotionally.

The third piece of legislation would require the developer to ensure that all child care programs are registered with the state. This will help parents identify programs that meet state standards of care.

The bill would also ensure that all child care programs are subject to regular inspections by the state. This will help ensure that child care programs are meeting the necessary health and safety standards.

For many high school students, May is considered testing month. Certainly in Yonkers many high school students spent much of May prepping for or taking advanced placement International Baccalaureate exams. For the past three years of my high school career, I have spent the month of May doing exactly that. With different exams and different exams, I often wonder how many exams I will take. Both are present challenges, as they are both the culmination of a year or two of a college-level course, but prepping for one or is the same as prepping for the other, and students who have taken AP classes are at a disadvantage. But what exactly is the difference between AP exams and how can you determine which students do better on each test.

The benefit of being dual enrolled in AP and IB is that they both offer a broader knowledge than is more in-depth than a typical high school course. The former focuses on the facts, and the latter focuses on the same. But the specifics of the programs can vary to different degrees of learning. AP is a more well-known program. It is exclusively offered in the United States and is offered through the College Board. Two million students take AP exams every year, compared to 135,000 students who take the IB exams. This difference in the focus, and material in AP is why the AP exams are so much longer.

Access to, and information about, quality care child should not be a luxury. Whether ensuring safe and nurturing child care for their very young children for decades. After school programs for their school-age children, they need to have the information and programs and qualifications of providers to determine the best placement. Mayer received the Kimberly Kennedy-Smuglove Award, which was founded by Kimberly Kennedy-Smuglove, who is known for her leadership, clinical excellence and technical expertise in the communication field.

Leaf Elder Law Attorney: Plan for the Years Ahead

Westchester law attorney Arthur Enza of Enza, Scalinati and Lipp, LLP, recently addressed the importance of long-term care planning at a presentation for members of the Yonkers Chamber of Commerce. With millions of individuals diagnosed with Alzheimer’s disease or another form of dementia this year, Enza noted that the fear of situations where care is required and the costs may not be covered by insurance or assets, presents a great concern.

One myth that often gets bandied about is that “the family can pay for it.” “There is an important misconception out there,” Enza explained. “You might believe that if someone has dementia, their children can take care of them. For many years, I’ve been telling people that they need to have a plan in place in advance.”

Enza explained that the process of caring for someone who has dementia is far more expensive than most people realize. “The costs can easily spiral out of control,” he said. “People have to take into account the costs of medical care, as well as the costs of housing and any long-term care.”

Enza emphasized the importance of planning ahead, especially when it comes to protecting one’s family from the financial burden of caring for someone with dementia. “It is important to have a plan in place before any serious health issues arise,” he said. “This way, you can ensure that your family is protected and that your wishes are respected.”

In Westchester, several of our elected state legislators have proposed Ethics reform that includes some or all of the common-sense solutions above. State Sen. Andrea Stewart-Cousins, Assemblyman Steve Stivers and Assembly member Susan Galef and others have been vocal about the need for legislative reform.

The time has come, in our view, for a protest, or revolt, to come from the state delega-
