Yonkers Public Schools Honors Top Seniors

The Yonkers Public Schools began its celebration of the Class of 2013 by introducing, and honoring, the valedictorians and salutatorians from each district high school at the Annual Valedictorian/Salutatorian Breakfast, held April 23 at The Riverview, with Superintendent of Schools Bernard Pierorazio, high school principal, families and guests honoring this amazing group of young adults and celebrating the accomplishments earned and the bright futures ahead.

Yonkers Rising will highlight each of the 14 valedictorians and salutatorians in future issues before the end of the school year.

Actor Tony Lo Bianco To Keynote Scholarship Brunch

Actor Tony Lo Bianco will help the Enrico Fermi Scholarship Foundation celebrate its 50th anniversary this Sunday, May 5 with a brunch at Westchester Manor, Yonkers Rising has proudly outlined the efforts of the Fermi Foundation and its hardworking members and volunteers who have kept this great organization alive for 50 years.

Lo Bianco said Fermi board member Sal Galasso went to one of Lo Bianco’s one-man, off-Broadway performances of former New York City Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, titled “The Little Flower.”

“He presented the program to me and I said ‘yes.’ The Fermi Scholarship fund has been giving scholarships to young Italian Americans, and keeping the generations of kids on the right track by educating them and making them fine citizens, something that is greatly needed in our country today,” said Lo Bianco. “It also makes the students proud of their heritage and makes them fine citizens. So many people are taking a different road. This group is a great example of what a fine young person should be.”

Lo Bianco’s performance of Mayor LaGuardia, a famous Italian American, is one example of why he makes a great keynote speaker for the Fermi Scholarship Breakfast.

Dear Editor:

I just finished reading the article on the settlement of the Zherka case and I must say I enjoyed the very best about giving us such a story.

The primary rationale by some of my colleagues who voted for this settlement is that even if a settlement is made concerns over future and continuing cost to the city are brought to the taxpayers, with claims that the mayor would have to risk the right to continue this action, which I believe was a fallacy that this argument was clearly stated. At the time of this vote, there was a substantial cost to the city for the Zherka case, and the city administration was not able to address the issue in a way that was favorable to taxpayers.

According to published reports of this settlement by Mayor Amicone, it was clear that the mayor personally negotiated the settlement, and I would like to be able to discuss this settlement in more detail.

It is extremely significant that Mr. Amicone supposedly attributes the settlement to the city, when in fact, it was actually negotiated by the former city councilwoman who voted for the taxpayer-agreed settlement. The mayor then agreed to pay for further legal fees resulting from this incident. If Mr. Amicone truly wanted to solve the Zherka case, he would have sought other settlements that were more favorable to the taxpayers.

In conclusion, I would like to express my appreciation for the mayor's efforts in settling the Zherka case, but I believe the settlement was not in the best interests of the city taxpayers.

Yonkers City Councilman Juan Grassi
"The story was finally picked up by the New York Post and other Westchester media outlets.

Westchester County District Attorney Janet DiFiore weathered a serious political challenge in April when she faced an independent campaign by Marina Buchanan, her former housekeeper, who has been pushing the allegations against DiFiore for years.

Vazquez, whose allegation that Buchanan's claim was improper, was an issue for the first time in 2006, when he called for fossil investigator who has been pushing the allegations against DiFiore for years. The story was finally picked up by the New York Post and other Westchester media outlets.

Vazquez, whose allegation that Buchanan's claim was improper, was an issue for the first time in 2006, when he called for DiFiore's resignation as Chair of the Joint Commission on Public Ethics, which he thought was a "foul" since 1987, and a permanent legal resident since 1998.

Buchanan's denials, and that no effort was made by DiFiore to win vindicating DiFiore.

There is currently no announced Republican candidate to challenge DiFiore, who was twice elected DA, also easily received the Democratic Party's nomination.

Bramson to Challenge Astorino

Jensens were confident that they would win the night. Fifty percent of the voting delegates present seemed ready to win the nomination. Bramson almost won the convention on the first round, with 877 votes, 46 percent of the vote, whereas Jenkins received 875 votes, 46 percent of the vote. Jenkins endorsed Bramson and County Democrats left in the race to support the County Democratic candidate. In their victory statement, they vowed to defeat Astorino in November. 'We want to make sure County Executive Astorino goes into November and is defeated,' said Bramson.

Bramson's victory was an upset over the past three months to four months, and Jenkins was very popular among Westchester Democrats. Bramson won by a large margin in upstate New York and the north, in the South, in the central area and in orange communities they have represented over four decades. Many of the votes from the rural and suburban Westchester Democrats that showed up to support Jenkins came with nearly 100 percent of the delegate votes for Bramson. Jenkins lost by one percent only 30 percent of the delegates for Bramson. The JHCNd did not win the nomination, and will not run for City Council. Bramson went for his opposition and the opposition is Bramson.

We hope that "more moderate" does not mean that an African-American vote for a Democrat. We hope that "more diverse" means that a Democrat is the choice of the minority community. Jenkins went far for his opposition and the opposition is Bramson.

The word before and after the convention was that Bramson "more moderate." "More diverse" means that an African-American vote for a Democrat. "More diverse" means that a Democrat is the choice of the minority community. Jenkins went far for his opposition and the opposition is Bramson.

Astorino Touts 0% Tax Increase During 4th State of the County

County Executive Rob Astorino delivered his fourth State of the County address Tuesday before a capacity audience at Playland in Rye. He touted a slew of economic development deals and pledged to keep tax increases at bay.

"Our county is poised for greatness," the County Executive said. "We are on the cusp of economic transformation. It is the right time for us to act."

Astorino, who recently cut the Westchester County budget by 2 percent, said his 2013-14 spending plan is the lowest ever since he took office in 2006.

"This budget, our fourth in decreasing dollars, once again lowers the tax burden on the hard-working families of Westchester," he said. "And it is just the beginning of what we will do for our economy and our communities."

Astorino said the Westchester Board of Legislators must give way to partnership.

"Rhetoric must yield to leadership," he said. "Rhetoric must yield to leadership — and the results that we all expect."

Astorino said he would push for more jobs and economic growth and that his administration would continue to free up land uses and other regulatory barriers.

"The public wants and deserves results. But results don’t come from words, they come from action," he said.

By Molly Lindsay

On April 6, a group of 15 Yonkers High School students teamed up with the National Park Service to help restore the Hurricane Sandy-damaged coastline of Fire Island. Funded by The New York Society for Ethical Culture, Groundwork Hudson Valley’s Environmental Adventurers involves Yonkers teens in environmental initiatives by offering free monthly day trips on weekends and holidays. Eight adults from NYSEC accompanied the youth, along with crew leaders from Groundwork Hudson Valley.

Like much of the south shore of Long Island, Fire Island National Seashore suffered greatly from the wrath of Hurricane Sandy in late October 2012. The crew worked in an area of the seashore that is still barricaded from the storm, cleaning up debris and removing lumber from the old boardwalk, which was destroyed. They also fixed the area near the visitor’s center, bagging and removing nearly two tons of debris.

"Most of the youth had never done restoration work, but they never stopped working or sat down," said Curt Collier, the director of national youth programs at Groundwork Hudson Valley, who led the group. Collier added that the National Park Service was thrilled with their work.

The participating teens will be considered for this summer’s Green Team, Groundwork’s youth employment program.

The group had lunch in the beautiful setting, toured Fire Island Lighthouse where the 1858 Fresnel lens is on display, and later traveled to Jones Beach to see Sandy recovery efforts there. The trip was a special treat for those who had never visited a beach before. One student enjoyed collecting seashells for the first time and brought some home as souvenirs.

"Seeing the damage at the lighthouse makes the work really relevant," said Sara Collin, the director of the program, and intern of Groundwork’s new Get Fresh Yonkers program. "The kids were so fun and engaged. While I was exhausted on the way back, they were still full of energy.”

"It was an area I knew had been affected by the storm and it felt good that I could help out and do my part," said Saunders High School sophomore Edwin Benitez.
