The Rockets’ Red Glare!

By Dan Murphy

The City of Yonkers rode through another budget battle-drama, ending last week with a budget for the next fiscal year that started July 1 and gross both the students and the taxpayers good news.

For once, the need of Yonkers was at the center of attention in Albany as the governor, State Senate and Assembly wrapped up the legislative session. Gov. Andrew Cuomo’s visit to Yonkers last month, and his promise to avoid layoffs of teachers and staff at the Yonkers Public Schools, was the first step.

Cuomo’s plan to provide $25 million out of a $108 million pot of funding to high-need school districts like Yonkers — with several funding winners — was the second step. And passage of $26 million in state aid for the school district, signed by Mayor Mike Spano was the final step.

Spano presented certificates to the Junior Docents in the museum’s Joyce Greene Education Center. He also presented a proclamation declaring the day “Junior Docent Program Day.”

“During his first term, he has served as the Ed Councilmember Michael Sabatino — a rising senior at Gorton High School, has a passion for education that she is so grateful for it, so I think it’s important that they could get a piece of this new pie for their schools,” said Mayor Mike Spano.

“Who is responsible for Yonkers finally getting the attention and credibility in Albany it fruit has always deserved is up for debate, and it was likely a group effort,” said Michael Botwinick, City Councilmember Michael Sabatino, standing with Mayor Mike Spano; HRM Director Richard Halevy, museum director of community development.

City Council Spotlight: Minority Leader Sabatino

Councilmember Michael Sabatino has been a resident of Yonkers for more than 14 years. He has been involved in an advocate in his neighborhood and one of the founders of the City of Yonkers.

“My life has been shaped by education and I am so grateful for it, so it’s important that other people get the opportunity to be education impact their lives, as well,” she said.

When Doris was in second grade, she was classified as a student with a learning disability that prevented her from being able to focus in a normal classroom setting. This meant that for the next six years of her life, she would be in a self-contained classroom.

Making the transition between elementary school and middle school gave her more access to other students, but once she had this access she became aware of how some of the other students went on to attend college. I want to thank the City of Yonkers and our public school students.”

These, Too, are 10 Things to Worry About

By Eric W. Schoen

The current and future locations of the Westchester County Department of Social Services and the Westchester Family Court are the subject of debate and disagreement between two frequent foes: County Executive Rob Astorino and County Legislator Ken Jenkins.

Jenkins last week is to open the Astorino Administration’s proposal to co-locate DSS and Family Court at 131 Broadway Ave, Yonkers. Currently, DSS is at 131 Wartburg Ave, while Family Court is located at 53 South Broadway, in downtown Yonkers.

Jenkins argues that it is inappropriate to have the court and DSS at the same location, and claims that the current owner of 131 Wartburg Avenue—Westchester County—owns several million dollars for an uncomplete-ed work and penalties for failure to deliver services pursuant to contract.

“Those two important government functions that provide services for children and families all over Westchester should remain separate,” said Jenkins. “Having a court located in a place to ap-ly for services and a drab dining-locale—don’t do it. On top of that, the county executive’s mis-

The current Family Court facility located at 53 South Broadway is in desperate need of resto-rination, based on a report commissioned in 2009 and sent to the Board of Legislators in 2010. Jenkins also wants a request for proposal to be issued, based on notification of Court Administrators guidelines, and called for Westchester County to immediately seek locations in the downtown area that meet the criteria established by OCA. One option that Jenkins has, which has a real services improvement, proposed would include creating the existing space at 53 South Broadway as a court facility.

Jenkins’s proposal is to procure the current court property at 53 South Broadway through competition, or on television? How many lives will be lost due to the fact that the prisoners are no longer on the lam.

“Metro-North has been under the microscope in other prisons in America, because if it does not have it before. The system was unstable and in fact certainly needed reform. New York City has had some success over the last two years and the sky hasn’t fallen. The sky hasn’t fallen over Oklahoma, either.

There are many things on the plates of Am-ricans, New York, and Westchester that says you have to worry about more than these two major decisions. They affect your safety and security much more than 10 on your radar. I thought I would put together a list of 10 of them for your consideration.

What is going on with our prison system? The government’s been short a high-security prison, imagine what it would do to our prisons. We are in a lot of trouble!

Imagine if a terrorist act happens – cars and lives.

An Open Letter to Elected Officials Regarding Budget

July 6, 2015

To Elected Officials:

We, the parents, staff and students of the Yonkers Public Schools, urge you to revisit your municipal budget to locate further frustrations combined with lack of confi- dence that many parents, staff and community supporters feel toward city government. It amounts to political theater and students should not cut services or harm any city workers.

An Open Letter to Elected Officials Regarding Budget

July 6, 2015

To Elected Officials:

We, the parents, staff and students of the Yonkers Public Schools, urge you to revisit your municipal budget to locate further frustrations combined with lack of confi- dence that many parents, staff and community supporters feel toward city government. It amounts to political theater and students should not cut services or harm any city workers.

- A member of the Groundwork Hudson clean-up team, and founder of a free education enrichment program for children. Thanks to his persistence, he has been able to reach into the world of education, where he has found professional connections that he uses to help his fellow students find programs for themselves. In fact, he has been able to negotiate free summer internships for students with limited financial means or who are at risk of drop-out. Michael has leveraged this network to offer assistance to students in the region.

- He has also been a leader in the community, serving as president of the Yonkers Historical Society. Michael is involved in a number of community organizations, including the Yonkers Public Library, the Yonkers Historical Society, and the Interfaith Council of Yonkers. These organizations have been instrumental in helping Michael to connect with other community leaders and to develop a network of support.

About $550 had been raised through donations and earlier fundraising, which allowed 20 children to attend the event at no cost. A grand total of 44 people attended, with 37 players taking their turn at the lanes.

Autism Project (FLOS) Inc., founder DaQueen Monroe and her team hosted an afternoon of fun June 20 at Homefield Bowl. This Yonkers-based organization offers educational and recreational events as a supportive activity for the whole family.

The Autism Project says events like these help individuals with autism and special needs better understand communication and socialization, which helps improve emotional health as these individuals grow and mature.

A large group of friends and family came out to support Smiley Riley.

A large crowd of family and friends were on hand June 20 at Rory Dolan’s to raise money for the medical care of 21-month-old Riley, who is about to undergo his fourth round of chemotherapy to treat leukemia.

In February, Riley was diagnosed with Acute Megakaryoblastic Leukemia, and he will require aggressive treatment and has been admitted to Maria Fareri Children’s Hospital, where he is expected to stay for a minimum of six months.

His treatment regimen will include a port, multiple bone marrow aspirations, spinal taps, blood transfusions and high dosages of chemotherapy, amongst other medications. The emotional and financial burdens experienced by this family are great and all the support possible is needed to allow them to focus their time and energy on this amazing little boy.

Our prayers and wishes are with Tara Manning-Burns and her wife Amy Manning-Burns, and Riley, who is known as Smiley Riley because of his happy and cheerful attitude.
