The fourth annual Ice Bucket Challenge was held Aug. 4 at Empire Casino at Yonkers Raceway. The event has become a rite of summer in Yonkers, and this year was no different, as Pat Quinn, Mayor Mike Spano presents a proclamation to John Khader, CEO of Top Class Limo, for 30 years in Yonkers.

By Dan Murphy

For any small business to survive – and thrive – for 30 years is a remarkable accomplishment, especially in today’s economic climate and competitive and ever-changing business world. Top Class Limo, located at 24 Abbott Ave. in Yonkers, recently celebrated 30 years of limousine service not only to the people of Yonkers, but to customers in Westchester, New York City and the entire Connecticut area.

We asked owner John Khader and Operations Manager Lauren Khader what the secret of their success is.

“Passion,” said John. “I am always thinking about how to be innovative and different from the competition. The limo market has changed dramatically over the 30 years that I have been in business, from regular size limos to stretched limos, and over the past five years to a wide array of choices for their events and special events by Democrats that is required,” Nicodemo, whom the Board of Elections invalidated our signatures determined was not eligible and Towler, whom the Board of Elections invalidated our signatures determined was not eligible and

A FIVE STAR INDEPENDENT, ASSISTED LIVING AND MEMORY CARE COMMUNITY
Mayor Mike Spano and Yonkers Superintendent Dr. Edwin Quezada with a young YPS student and teacher at last year’s Backpack to School drive.

Yonkers Mayor Mike Spano recently announced the launch of this year’s “Backpack to School” donation drive. The seventh annual donation drive provides backpacks and school supplies to Yonkers Public School students most in need. This year’s drive is in partnership with sponsors Hannaford, Productions, Empire State Development and Federal Express.

Items donated will be provided to the students of Thomas Cornell Academy in Yonkers. “Backpack to School supplies are very expensive and can be a huge financial burden for working families, especially those who have more than one child in school,” said Spano. “I encourage the entire community to join us in Backpack to School drive and lend a helping hand to these students most in need.”

Each family that donates backpacks and school supplies may be mailed a personalized note from the students of Thomas Cornell Academy in Yonkers. “Our families do their best to provide new school supplies to Yonkers Public School students most in need. This year’s drive is in partnership with schools, libraries and each of the city’s four police precincts. Suggested supply packages for donation include backpacks filled with crayons, colored pencils, washable markers, glue sticks and Elmer’s glue, rulers, pink erasers, number two pencils, paper sharpeners, composition books, pencil pouches, pocket folders, bandanatips and tissue packages.”

The Backpack to School drive will run through August 31st. For more information about the program, contact the City of Yonkers Public Information Office at 914-684-8200 or visit www.yonkersny.gov/backpack.

Most families dread the beginning of school, Tuesday night’s lightening-up of the eyes as everyone looks to the horizon that hasn’t seen in years. The water in the pool and in the ocean is comfortably warm, and the bar are hot to cool us off.

If you haven’t tried Uber or LYFT, you are in the minority. They get you where you want to go, at a cost that fits your budget. But Uber and LYFT are far from the only options for getting around New York City. New York state has a number of other options that don’t quite fit into the traditional taxi category. It can be overwhelming to try to navigate the myriad of options, but with a little research, you can find the one that works best for you.

Yonkers Native Named Public Safety Commissioner

Westerich County Executive George Latimer recently announced Tom Gleason as the new commissioner of the Department of Public Safety, and Terrance Raynor as the new deputy commissioner. The two were sworn into office by Administrative Judge Kathie Davidson.

“Tom has been a gentleman taking on these responsibilities who are extremely well prepared,” said Latimer, who handed the men their new shields. “Those are men who have been committed to service in police work for their whole lives. They have both been involved with almost every aspect of police at every level. Both of them know police work from the ground up. These are individuals who have experienced everything that our police experiences. We are fortunate to have both of these men take on these responsibilities.”

Gleason said he is extremely proud of the men and women of the county police; and the work they do every day.

“Spent my whole professional career here with the Westchester County Police Depart- ment,” he said. “I have a deep sense of pride and commitment to service for these officers and staff. I want to do all I can to make it even better. I look forward to working with all the men and women of the police department to keep up moving forward, and utilizing social media to better to connect with the public.”

Raynor added: “To the men and women of the Westchester County Department of Pub- lic Safety, I look forward to working with you. I look forward to continuing to enhance the professionalism of the police department, and working toward making Westchester County the finest county in the country.”

Gleason, a Yonkers native, is a graduate of Fordham University. He began his law enforce- ment career when he joined the Department of Public Safety in January 1983 as a member of the Patrol Division. He rose through the ranks of detective, sergeant and lieutenant after just 10 years on the job.

Over his extensive career, Gleason worked and supervised in every division of the depart- ment. His experience includes patrol, general investigations, white collar fraud, the Civil Division (sh orth’s office), narcotics, the Office of Pro- fessional Responsibility and Special Investiga- tions, field services and support services.

Gleason was promoted to captain in 2007 and晋升 to major in 2013. He is a member of numer- ous law enforcement associations and a graduate of the prestigious Federal Bureau of Investiga- tions National Academy in Quantico, Va.

Sarah Lawrence professor Linwood Lewis said of his dreams of becoming a doctor came to an end when he took his first chemis- try class. But that didn’t deter him from becom- ing a scientist. His love for psychology led him to a career in the social sciences instead, he told Yonkers students.

Lewis was one of five panelists who spoke to 140 Yonkers Middle School students at Sarah Lawrence College as part of Ask the Scientist, a program that allowed students to quiz scientists on their research and careers.

The only 25 program was one of the finals activities in the STEM 2018 program at SLC’s Career for the Urban River at Beal- l this summer, in partnership with the Yonkers School District. Students studied a month of hands-on marine biology research, testing water samples, collecting sediment, and caching and releasing fish and other oceanic animals.

Elise Care, director of education at Ascolat, was part of the STEM program, and said the Ask the Scientist event helped students to better understand that science comes from all walks of life and disciplines. “Scientists look like you and me,” she told students.

Shelby Needs a Home

The Yonkers Animal Shelter has many pets available for adopt- ion. Shelby is about 2 years old and weighs 62 pounds. She’s a mixed- breed dog who staff think is most likely a pit and American Bulldog mix. She and a smaller male dog were abandoned at a local veterinarian’s office about two months ago; she has been adopted. Shelby is sweet and knows ba- sic commands. She is eager to learn and like to please her person. She loves treats and plays a good game of fetch. Shelby likes most dogs but she would have to meet your dog be- fore considering an adoption.

Visit Shelby any day of the week at the Yonkers Animal Shelter, 1100 Central Avenue. For more information, call 914-377-6730 or 201-481-2215.

Dear Ms. Murphy,

I’m writing to you regarding your recent article titled “Yonkers Mosque Loses Appeal,” printed July 25 in Eastchester Rising. In reading your well-written and documented article, I was surprised that one obvious and critical issue was seemingly addressed neither by any appropriate regulatory bodies nor by the writer of the article, yourself: Parking.

Just across the street is St. John’s Episco- pal Church with its own parking lot, specifically designated for church patrons only. The streets in the neighborhood are very narrow and cannot be used regularly for parking by numerous visi- tors without causing a major distress for the lo- cal residents. Are the prospective visitors pla- nning to walk through the neighborhood to visit the mosque? I’m curious if that issue was ever addressed in legal proceedings? I’m curious if that issue was ever addressed in legal proceedings?

Mosquitoes With West Nile Virus Found in Westchester

The Westchester County Health Department recently announced that this season’s first two batches of mosquitoes carrying West Nile Virus were found in northern and southern Westchester. The announcement was made during the weekly mosquito spraying season, when the health department treats nearby neighborhoods to prevent mosquito infestations. "The surrounding areas of positive mosquito batches are being monitored closely," said Dr. Sharon Henderson, county health commissioner. "In addition to monitoring mosquito activity in the surrounding areas of West Nile, the New York State Department of Health, Statewide, the state health department has identified 69 positive mosquito batches.

The department offers various resources to help prevent mosquito bites, including information on using repellents and wearing long-sleeved shirts and long pants when outdoors. People can protect themselves by staying indoors during peak mosquito activity, from sunset to dawn.

For the Win, which benefits Quinn’s personal care, as well as numerous non-profit ALS research organizations.

Team Quinn for the Win, was selling T-shirts and getting everyone ready. On Facebook, Quinn for the Win posted: “This past weekend was the Yonkers Ice Bucket Challenge! It was an incredible day with hundreds turning out for what has become an August tradition here in our city. It’s not just social media hyped for us. It’s a day we all come together to show Pat and the entire ALS community we are still fighting with them. It’s a reminder to the world that ALS is still without a cure with extremely limited treatment options. It’s also a day we bring people together for a fun event where smiles take over the atmosphere! A truly inspiring day every year!”

“We have so many people to thank, hopefully we don’t forget anyone! Thank you to the City of Yonkers, Mayor Mike Spano, his staff, and the Yonkers City Council members who came out to support. Your continued support is incredible. Thank you to Empire City Casinos, Taryn Duffy, and their staff. You guys are real a generous host. Thank you to DJ Lenny for keeping the music flowing throughout the day. Thank you to everyone who volunteered. Thank you to all the ALS patients who made it out. Team John and Pauline were in the house! And to finish, thank you to our special guest John Frates. We love the Frates family and we continue to fight this disease side by side! Thank you everyone!”

John Frates is the father of Pete Frates, the man credited, along with Quinn, as co-founder of the Ice Bucket Challenge.

Thank you, Pat Quinn, for your courage in your fight, and sharing another great day with all of Yonkers.

ALS, a disease with no known cure, usually strikes people between the ages of 40 and 70. Approximately 20,000 Americans currently suffer from the disease.

Quinn, 35, was diagnosed with ALS in March 2013. For more information on Quinn and his fight against ALS, go to Quinn4theWin.com or alsa.org.
