Yonkers Native Named 'Next Fitness Star'

Yonkers native Selena Watkins is honored by "Women’s Health" magazine.

"Women’s Health" magazine recently announced the winner of its fourth annual nationwide search for "The Next Fitness Star," sponsored by Propel Electrolyte Water. Selena Watkins from Westchester was one of five finalists narrowed down from thousands of submissions for the competition. She was revealed as this year’s winner on CBS’s "The Insider" on Aug. 15 with guest judge Debbie Matenopoulos.

With 15 years of dance experience, Watkins began her career in fitness by chance when a friend asked her to fill in as the instructor for a hip-hop aerobics class. "Dance and fitness use so many of the same tools, it seemed like a no-brainer not to combine them," the 28-year-old said in the July/August issue of "Women’s Health." Watkins parlayed those certifications as she could to expand her knowledge, all while performing as a Brooklyn Lynx dancer for three years. Today, she teaches regularly at SoulCycle and runs a traveling workshop based on her own Caribbean-style dance workout called Socanomics. Watkins was selected by a combination of votes from readers and fans, as well as input from a panel of expert judges including Matenopoulos, co-host of "The Insider" and lifestyle expert on Hallmark Channel’s "Home and Family;" Jan Ace, C.S.C.S., "Women's Health" fitness director and Ironman World Championship finisher; and Jennifer Jenkins, founder of The Hollywood Trainer DVD program and online club.

As the 2016 Next Fitness Star, Watkins will star in her own "Women's Health" workout DVD, which will be available in January. For more information, visit www.TheNextFitnessStar.com.

Engel Celebrates Women’s Equality Day; Announces Grant

Earlier this week, Congresswoman Eliot Engel introduced Women’s Equality Day, in celebration of the 96th anniversary of the 19th Amendment, which guaranteed a woman’s right to vote in the United States Constitution.

“Today we celebrate one of our democracy’s most significant milestones. Women finally gained the right to vote. The time is now to live up to its democratic ideals. However, it is also time to recommit our commitment to finishing the job.”

Nearly a century after women gained the right to vote, women on average still earn 79 cents for every $1 earned by men. That’s why one of the key components of the House Democrats’ Stronger America agenda is passing the Paycheck Fairness Act, which would work to ensure that women finally receive equal pay for equal work.

In addition, our country sorely needs more family-friendly workplace policies,” continued Engel. “Women today bear the burden of the brunt caused by the lack of paid sick days and the lack of paid family leave. The workplace arrangements and/or real-world commitments, when women can’t take time off to recover from pregnancy or illness, or to care for a sick child, they have to make impossible choices between their families’ health and their job security must be strengthened and enhanced for our women to thrive.”

On this Women’s Equality Day, let us recommit ourselves to putting in place policies that ensure that women can fully participate in our economy and reach their full potential, knowing that when women succeed, America succeeds.”

Engel, a senior member of the House Energy and Commerce Committee, also recently announced that the City of Yonkers has been awarded more than $57,000 in federal grant money from the Edward Byrne Memorial Justice Assistance Grant Program. The city will be able to utilize the funds for law enforcement initiatives and increase essential law enforcement services. The funding will allow for the purchase of equipment to enhance technology and improve communications, including license plate readers to increase public safety.

Ty Tang, Executive Director of Hudson Valley Blood Services, said, “This year, as in years past, we are hoping to see many more donors come out and give the gift of life. In 2015, with the help of our community, we were able to collect 1,967 units of blood.

Hunger & Homelessness In Westchester

By Clifford Jackson of Larchmont and Rep. Eliot Engel

We have been writing about hunger and homelessness on Food Bank for Westchester since its 36-year connec-tively-funded Food Mobil Pantry to travel throughout Westchester County delivering food to impoverished areas.

Food Bank for Westchester uses its 36-foot commercial-equipped Food Bank Mobil Pantry to travel throughout Westchester County delivering food to impoverished areas.

Fortunately, the food bank almost always has meat. The mobile pantry usually operates more than 20 times a week, distributing food to thousands of Westchester County residents. FBW estimates that 20 percent of residents are food insecure. This is an outrageous by a republication “repudiation of the workers’ right to work in the field of life and human dignity.”

People should not go bankrupt due to an illness. People should not die from seeing a doctor because they can’t afford one. We are not the only industrialized western nation without universal health care. That’s our moral obligation. Social Security must be strengthened and enhanced for our seniors to be able to retire with dignity.

There are many volunteers in Westchester County who work for food pantries and homeless shelters who serve their neighbors every day, and this is an exemplar we should follow.

Our culture demonizes those in need of food assistance and shelter. This stereotype is the exact opposite of the reality that this demonstration by many widows of the expectancy of this nation and those who have this profound appreciation, especially when this society purports to have so-called “Christian val-

Most of the clients we serve usually fall into the following categories: the elderly, the disabled, or financially challenged. Many others also encounter more vulnerable populations, including the homeless.

In the city of Yonkers, we estimate that 20 percent of our citizens are food insecure. What’s more, we estimate 20 percent of children in Yonkers suffer from malnutrition.

City Could Lose $9.6M Due to Common Core Penalty

Last week in Yonkers, we highlighted the State Senate race between Sen. George Latimer and Julia Killian, which included discussion and opposition by both candidates to a recent proposed U.S. Department of Education regulation to strip funding from school districts that have more than 5 percent of students opting out of the Common Core exams, saying it would unfairly hurt Westchester.

Latimer maintained that the loss of funding for the Yonkers Public School could be $5.6 million. "Using opt-out rates from 2015, the Yonkers, New Rochelle and White Plains school districts would potentially face the greatest loss of old," said Latimer, who recently issued a letter to the New York State Commissioner of Education MaryEllen Elia, State Sen. George Latimer has called on her to use her authority to block the implementation of any proposed punitive actions when parents opt their children out of standardized tests. Latimer, ranking member of the Senate Education Committee, commanded Elia for opposing the proposed sanctions, which would reduce funding for disadvantaged students in districts with opt-out rates exceeding 5 percent. The commissioner opposed the bill, feared a possible loss of federal funding through the proposed regulation, and spoke out publicly against the idea over the last two weeks.

In his letter to Elia, Latimer wrote: "We know that the roll out of these tests and the burdensome implementation created huge turmoil, and in no small part contributed to the climate of distrust that exists among some parents. And since then, you have been extremely fair, protecting local school districts from added confusion and punishment." Latimer pointed out to Elia that under the proposed regulation, the district alone stood to lose more than $1.5 million in Title I funding, a program created by President Lyndon Johnson as part of the War on Poverty.

"My request in this letter is simple: I implore you to please consider the impact of any such punitive measures in the State of New York if our pleas to abandon this part of the regulation go unheard by Secretary Elia," wrote Latimer.

Lowey Urges Reduced Cost Of Life-Saving EpiPens

Congresswoman Nita Lowey, the senior Democrat on the House Appropriations Committee, today sent a letter to Mylan, the pharmaceutical company that manufactures EpiPens, expressing concern about the skyrocketing cost of the drug.

According to various news reports, Mylan has increased the cost of the drug by 40 percent since 2009. Ms. Lowey said: "Such a dramatic increase in the cost of an already expensive medication is of serious concern to individuals and families who rely upon these medications, which often require immediate medical intervention, affecting an estimated 15 million Americans, including one in every 13 children."

Access to EpiPens remains as critical now as ever, particularly ahead of a new school year. In her letter, Ms. Lowey urged Mylan to take immediate steps to lower the price of the drug.

"Such a dramatic increase in the cost of five life-saving medications of this magnitude and duration," continued Ms. Lowey, "is unacceptable and cannot be allowed to continue."

The letter was addressed to Heather Bresch, Mylan’s chief executive officer.
